Joan Benoit Samuelson: An American Original

A select few athletes on the world's biggest stages transcend a sport. Michael Jordan in basketball, Joe Montana in football and Wayne Gretzky in hockey are perhaps the best known, while Joan Benoit, the first women's Olympic Marathon champion, is perhaps one of the least known.

In 1979, Joan Benoit, then a student at Bowdoin College in Maine, burst on the U.S. sports scene with her surprise Boston Marathon win in 2:35:16, the fastest performance by an American woman at the time. Four years later, she won Boston again in a world best time of 2:22:43.

For the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles, the International Olympic Committee (IOC) finally added the women's marathon to the Summer Games. As a result, the first U.S. Women's Olympic Marathon Trials to select the Olympic marathon team was contested on May 12, 1984 in Olympia, Washington.

Based on her 1983 Boston performance, Benoit would have been the odds-on favorite except 17 days before the Trials she had arthroscopic surgery on her right knee. Fortunately, her short recovery went well, and Benoit was confident that she could go the distance in Olympia. And go the distance she did with a convincing and inspirational victory in 2:31:04. Her coach Bob Sevene later called her "the toughest athlete I've ever seen."

Three months later, in Los Angeles, Benoit, then 27, surprised the women's Olympic Marathon field - which included 1983 world champion Grete Waitz - by taking off 14 minutes into the biggest race of her life and the steely Maine native never looked back as she ran unchallenged into the Coliseum filled with 77,000 cheering people. With Joanie's dominant 2:24:52 performance at the crucible of the Olympics against a cast which included marathon greats Waitz, Rosa Mota, Ingrid Kristiansen, Lisa Martin, Lorraine Moller and Priscilla Welch, many still consider it the greatest women's marathon performance ever.

As the first women's Olympic Marathon gold medalist recounted later, "I was amazed they didn't come with me. I had no second thoughts."

In October 1985 at the Chicago Marathon, Benoit Samuelson further solidified her place in sports history by defeating Kristiansen and Mota in an American record time of 2:21:21 (#2 all-time behind Kristiansen's then world record). To cap her year, she won the 1985 Sullivan Award as the U.S. amateur athlete of the year, and she is the last distance runner to win the annual award. Other distance runners who have won it include Frank Shorter (1972) and Mary Decker (1982).

As Benoit Samuelson's golden moments approach their 20th anniversaries, her impact still resonates thru the sport as she has influenced and inspired a generation of American distance runners including fellow New Englander and 1992 Olympic 10,000 meter bronze medalist Lynn Jennings and current distance aces Deena Kastor and Marla Runyan.

As the reserved running legend prepares for the upcoming U.S. Olympic Marathon Trials in St. Louis, she spends time with her family - husband Scott and teenage children Abby and Anders - in Freeport, Maine, does volunteer work, gardens and works on the popular Peoples Beach to Beacon 10K - which she founded - in her hometown of Cape Elizabeth.

USA Women's Marathon Championships 2001 to 2003

New York City Marathon

New York City, NY, November 4, 2001

U. S. Olympian Deena Drossin, by placing 7th in the New York City Marathon, winning its attendant USA Championship, and clocking a 2:26:58 time - the fastest U.S. women's mark all-time at New York and fastest U.S. women's debut marathon - ran U.S. hopes back into the lead pack of world marathoning. Overall winner Margaret Okayo of Kenya set a new course record in 2:24:21.

On a lightly breezy day with a 54 degree starting line temperature and sunny skies, Drossin, 28, of Mammoth Lakes, Calif. led four U.S. women to top-15 finishes in the race. Behind Drossin followed Team USA California teammate and fellow marathon debutante Milena Glusac, 13th in 2:34:48, Colleen DeReuck, 14th in 2:35:31 and Jeanne Hennessy, 15th in 2:39:58.

"I feel extremely lucky to have finished as high as I did today," said Drossin, the 4th fastest U.S. woman all-time behind Joan Samuelson, Julie Brown and Kim Jones. "It was a fabulous and intimidating field."

New York also served as a one day window for Americans to qualify for the 2004 U.S. Olympic Marathon Trials, and 11 men (five with the "A" standard) and 13 women (four with the "A" standard) did so.

fastest U.S. debut (previously Lesley Lehane's 2:32:11 at the 1988 Twin Cities Marathon)

Sub-2:48:01 qualified for 2004 U.S. Olympic Marathon Trials; sub-2:40:00 earned the Olympic Trials "A" standard.

Twin Cities Marathon

Minneapolis/St. Paul, Minnesota, September 29, 2002

Irina Bogacheva from Kirghizstan left nothing to chance as she led from the Metrodome to the State Capitol to win the women's overall race in 2:29:39 and $14,000. Jill Gaitenby of Providence, RI and Susannah Beck of Eugene, Ore. worked together most of the race, with Gaitenby separating herself over the final miles to take second and the USA Women's Marathon Championship in 2:36:10; her first national title and a personal record. Gaitenby also became the oldest woman to win the national marathon title (35 years, 251 days). Beck was third in 2:36:34 (2nd U.S.). Linda Somers Smith, a 1996 Olympic marathoner and two-time USA marathon champion, finished 5th overall in 2:39:26, good enough for the USA Masters title.

Michelob Ultra USA Women's Marathon Championship

St. Louis, MO, Saturday, April 5, 2003

Sara Wells of Edina, Minn. made her marathon debut a smashing success with her first national title at the Michelob Ultra USA Women's Marathon Championship in the Gateway City. During the 25th mile on the criterium course, the Team USA Minnesota athlete overtook veteran Colleen De Reuck who had control of the race until the windy, cold condition got the best of her. Wells, 24, won her first U.S. title in 2:35:37 with the hypothermia-suffering De Reuck second (2:37:41).

1) Sara Wells, MN	2:35:37#	$19,000 *
2) Colleen De Reuck, CO	2:37:41	$12,000 *

* Note that the 'best' performance above by Jenny Spangler does not conform to current USATF rules for Junior Records or Bests since Spangler turned 20 later in the same calendar year. At the time the performance was run it did comply with USATF (formerly TAC) LDR standards and procedures which defined a Junior as someone who is 19 or younger on the day of competition.
