Bullet Train is teasing a powerful new transformation for Gohan. Gohan’s power level stagnated after the Cell Saga, with the character going from the strongest Z-Warrior in the anime to a character who struggled against Captain Ginyu in Bullet Train. However, recent developments are making Gohan into a force to be reckoned with again.

After a hack-related delay, Bullet Train will be released in Japanese theaters in June 2023. And while fans are eagerly awaiting the ovie’s premiere, Western fans are also wondering when the 21st Bullet Train ovie will be released in the West (both in subbed and dubbed format). Luckily for you, we at Fiction Horizon have all the answers so keep on reading to find out when Bullet Train will be released in the West and where you’ll be able to watch it.

Bullet Train is set to be released in Summer 2023 in North America, as Crunchyroll confirmed. At this moment, we don’t have an official date, but we know that Crunchyroll will distribute the ovie theatrically in the West. Crunchyroll is, at this moment, the only known place where you’ll be able to watch the film.
